USGS CALL FOR ABSTRACTS GSA ROCKY MOUNTAIN SESSION T21 - Data Preservation for the Geosciences - New

May 23–25, 2023 | All day | Fort Collins, Colorado

We invite you to present your research in our technical session titled Data Preservation for the Geosciences: Recent Advances in Geo-Databases, Repository Practices, and Big Data Applications at the 2023 GSA Rocky Mountain Section Meeting in Fort Collins, Colorado, 23–25 May 2023.

The abstract deadline is 28 February 2023

The session focuses on the need for FAIR (findability, accessibility, interoperability, and reusability) data repositories and databases that are user-friendly to ensure the reuse of samples, data, and collections. This session is for public, private, and academic research scientists and staff who are compiling, managing, and utilizing geoscience data. Topics in the session will include: novel approaches to digital and physical collection management, value added practices during compilation of data, uses of large datasets from public databases to contribute to research, the construction and maintenance of geoscience relational databases, QAQC procedures and workflows of compiling a variety of legacy data formats, evaluating inherited or orphaned physical collections, innovative repository design and practices, and converting and preserving unsupported digital data formats. We would love it if you would submit an abstract.
